P.R.E.F.A.C.E.

We present our first issue of the Huntsville Directory with the belief that it will be found as nearly accurate as any book of the kind can possibly be.

The growing importance of the City demands that its population and business should be represented in this shape, and the compiler expresses the hope that this volume will be the first of a long series.

It depends upon the public spirit of the business men and the patronage they extend to the enterprize, to determine whether the publication shall be continued.

The publisher begs to extend to the subscribers to the present volume, his sincere thanks for their liberality; also, to W. P. MILLS, Esq., for the sketch of Huntsville, furnished for this volume.

SKECH OF HUNTSVILLE.

THE City of Huntsville is situated in the county of Madison, in the Northern part of the State of Alabama. It lies in a lovely valley, at the immediate foot of Mount Sano, a continuation of the range of Cumberland mountains. It is ten miles north of the Tennessee river by turnpike, and through the facilities of the Memphis and Charleston Railroad, is within twelve hours travel of Memphis, Tenn., and fourteen hours of Nashville.

Huntsville took its name from Capt. John Hunt, an efficient officer and veteran of the Revolutionary War. He was the grand-father of Col. William Acklen of this place, at present a prominent citizen of the State. In the year 1806, Capt. John Hunt erected the first log-cabin that was ever built on the forest site of what is now, without denial, the Gem of Southern Cities. The settlement was known for some years as "Hunt's Big Spring," yet as soon as it took the aspect of a village it was called Huntsville. It seems by some rivalry between literary taste and gratitude among the early settlers of this place that for some space of time, perhaps about the year 1810, the place was called Twickenham, yet I find by an act of the General Assembly of the Territorial Legislature of Mississippi Territory, passed in 1811, that the name of Huntsville was permanently given the place at the urgent request of a majority of the citizens, whose disposition was rather to pay a debt of gratitude, even in this small way, to the pioneer founder of their home, than a tribute to a foreign poet:

The first disposal of the public lands upon which Huntsville is now situated, was made at Nashville, Tenn., in the year 1809, this section of country being then embraced in what was called Mississippi Territory, to Capt. John Hunt, before mentioned, yet by a too severe requisition upon his means as a poor man, and a pioneer, the purchase went by default the next day, and was bought by Col. Leroy Pope at ten dollars per acre. For nearly two years after the place took the name of Huntsville, the only places of business or amusement were a small drygoods store, a grocery, (then called a whisky shop,) a hatter's shop, and a bowling alley. These furnished the chief employment of its inhabitants, together with a frequent indulgence in card-playing, quarter-racing and hunting. The head-waters of the Spring, then covering three times the extent of ground now occupied by it, afforded the finest kind of sport. Deer and ducks, fish and all kinds of game frequented its waters. The two sons of Capt. Hunt, William and George, were looked upon as the greatest hunters of their day. To say that the state of society at this time was rude, would be but to assert the natural consequence of a moment's thought ; for a people, few in number, in a new country where the chief employments of the day were amid the very rudeness of nature, to have attempted the refinements of society would have been but to mock the simple nature of their callings. Murder was not rife here, as in the days of the early settlement of other southern cities, yet morality or virtue was far from holding their reign here. Card-playing and the association with improper women were at an early date indulged in, yet the early exercise of legal jurisdiction here seems to have commenced with the correction of these abuses. Court days and muster days were the occasions upon which the people usually congregated en masse. Then it was that fist-fights and free fights were usually indulged in to the usual end of bruised faces and bodies, and a too ready access to stones often rendered these encounters more serious than the feelings of animosity really felt, would have otherwise dictated. A resort to the pistol or bowie-knife at that time was of rare occurrence, for at that early day, when upon a man's physical prowess depended mainly his coveted position in the social circle or as a citizen, a test of his manhood and a consequent success of one over the other, was usually the end of the feud. In the absence of a state of society where "thrift (only) follows fawning," these early settlers showed a singular superiority of judgment over us of the present day in matters of a personal nature; they were rather used to settle the "ills" they had by a resort to nature's defenses, than by the use of pistol or knife, "fly to those they know not of." The first trial for murder coming under the cognizance of a court at Huntsville, was dealt with in a summary, yet strictly legal way. It was the case of a man named Newman, a flatboat hand, from the Tennessee trading country, who had been to New Orleans as a hand on a flatboat, and having with his companions been paid off, was returning with them on foot home. He framed an excuse for remaining behind with one of his companions for a night, and as he slept Newman cut his throat with a razor. Upon coming up alone, with his companions, he could give no satisfactory reason for his absence, and was arrested and taken back to where they had slept, when the murdered man was found with his throat cut, and his money on the person of Newman. Upon his being brought back to Huntsville the highest indignation was expressed, and no little excitement, yet it was tempered by that high respect for the law which has ever been characteristic of the people. Distinguished counsel was employed for the prisoner and in the absence of an efficient district attorney, a purse was made up and tendered to C. C. Clay, then a practicing lawyer here, to prosecute him. He promptly declined the purse, yet for the cause of justice and the protection of a young and growing community, he agreed to act as counsel against the prisoner. He did so, and Newman, the murderer of his trusting companion, amid the wilds of the Mississippi Territory, expiated his crime on the gallows, in the edge of town, and on the spot now occupied by the beautiful residence of Mrs. William Patton. There is much interesting legend belonging to the early settlement of Huntsville, which in another place would be of the highest interest to the citizens of the place, and a collection of the material descriptive of these early days would be an interesting task.

The first courts held in Huntsville, were held in a small log house, near where stands the present court-house. The site of the present splendid court-house was an ugly, rocky hill, and to the north of it, where is now a beautifully graded court-yard, was an unseemly and rugged hollow. In the year 1814 a brick court-house took the place of the log house, and in 1838 the present court-house was built.

The establishment of the first newspaper in Alabama, or more properly the Mississippi Territory, has been of late a matter of some controversy, but by a comparison of the earliest issues we have, it is now a settled point that the date of the earliest paper known in the State, was in 1812. The name of the paper was the Madison Gazette, published in Huntsville, by a Mr. Parham, a practical printer, from Nashville, Tenn. In 1816 the Gazette took the name of Huntsville Republican, and was edited by Thomas B. Grantland. Its regular changes are hard to trace.

The first bank established at Huntsville was chartered in the year 1817, and was called the Planters' and Merchants' Bank of Huntsville. Col. Leroy Pope was President, and Geo. Cox, Cashier. About the year 1832 the Madison Turnpike Company was chartered, and a turnpike road built four miles out of town to Ditto's Land, on Tennessee River, a distance of fourteen miles. From that time a system of McAdamizing has been going on which has given to Huntsville the best roads and turnpikes of any southern city of its size. There are three turnpikes leading out of Huntsville, and a fourth is in active projection.

In the year 1825 the "Indian Creek Canal" was chartered to lead from Huntsville to Triana, on Tennessee River, a distance of fifteen miles. This canal, the first one ever built in the State, and if I mistake not, the only one, was intended to facilitate the transportation of cotton from the surrounding country to New Orleans. The Canal failing in the end for which it was intended, was abandoned in a few years and is now antiquated and useless.

It was about the year 1826 that the present system of water works was constructed by Hunter Peale and Thomas Barclay, in conjunction with wooden pipes.

In the early settlement and gradual progress of Huntsville, the principal religious denominations were the Methodist and Presbyterian. The first Presbyterian organization made here was by Gideon Blackburn, in the year 1818, and the first Presbyterian church built, was in 1821. The first Methodist organization was about the same time as the Presbyterian.

There were schools established here as early as 1807. About that time Wyatt Bishop taught a school here, and Mrs. Posey about the same time was teaching here. She was the mother of the present Judge Florence, of Alabama, and is spoken of as a lady of virtuous delicacy and as an efficient instructress. Wyatt Bishop is said to have been "a good man and a good teacher." Peace to their ashes! It can but awaken a feeling of pious and tender consideration at their mention, as some of us know them to have been the instructors of our forefathers. In the year 1819 Mrs. Sarah McKay established a school here and has continued as an instructress in this place ever since with only an interval of three years, thus giving to her, without —I suppose any doubt, the prestige of being the oldest living female teacher in this part of the State. She certainly enjoys the goodly satisfaction of possessing to as good a degree as can the confidence of the young and old. She is teaching at present a large school here in conjunction with her husband, Col. Wm. McKay, also an old tutor. In 1821 Green Academy was chartered, and is next to the oldest institution of learning in the State,—an institution chartered under the territorial legislature at St. Steven, has seniority.

The immediate country around Huntsville was for many years a cattle country, as distinct from a stock country; there were few hogs here, other than wild Indian hogs. Cattle raisers at an early day here would drive their cattle all the way to Baltimore and exchange them for dry goods, groceries and other marketable merchandise which were saleable here, and wagon them to Huntsville.

The convention which was called to adopt and draft a constitution for the State of Alabama, in 1819, sat at Huntsville. This convention was composed of forty-five delegates, the County of Madison sending eight. It certainly is a matter of pardonable mention to give their names: John W. Walker, President of the convention; Clement C. Clay, Henry Chambers, Henry Minor, John M. Taylor, Lemuel Mead, John L. Towns and Gabriel Moore. The Hon. C. C. Clay is the only living member of that Convention in the County of Madison, and by an accurate computation, there are at present only four members of the ferty-five living. In the same year in which the convention sat here, the Legislature sat and elected John W. Walker and Wm. R. King, U. S. Senators for the State of Alabama.

The numberless and unparalleled inducements held out by Huntsville as a healthy and pleasant home,—its spring of pure limestone water, its bracing and pure air, its local scenery, its early roads and traveling facilities, have been of so marked a kind as to render its advancement to its requisite population rapid and sure; it is therefore unnecessary to trace the different origin of city improvements and the changes of society further than to say, that without ever essaying to be a city of much mercantile importance, it has ever commanded the services of efficient and competent workmen and tradesmen, doing a rare and select mercantile business, and has from early days boasted unrivaled society. A glimpse of Huntsville as it now is, and what it surely promises to be, is not only of more interest to those for whom a Directory is intended, but more in keeping with the facilities of the writer for knowing of the place.

THE FEMALE SCHOOLS OF HUNTSVILLE.—It is conceded a point that there is no city of size in the whole South that can boast the school facilities of Huntsville. Besides some three or four minor female schools for children, we boast the Huntsville Female College and the Huntsville Seminary; two first class institutions, respectively under the auspices of the Methodist and Presbyterian churches of this place. The Huntsville Seminary has but to point to her consecutive generations of accomplished graduates, many who have figured respectively as belles, matrons and grand mothers, as her eulogy. There is naught truer than that to this institution belongs much of the credit bestowing upon Huntsville, its national reputation for refined and accomplished women. It is at present under the proprietorship of Prof. S. J. Mayhew, an erudite gentleman and an accomplished scholar. (See engraving opposite commencement of names).

The Huntsville Female College offers, as relates to educational advantages, embodying ability of Faculty, local and domestic conveniences, unprecedented advantages. In securing the services of Dr. A. R. Erwin as Principle of the College, the Trustees and community have expressed a long coveted consummation. The edifice is situated on one of the loveliest streets of Huntsville. The arrangements, fixtures and plan of the building are unsurpassed as relates to comfort and completeness. On every floor of the immense building are dumb waiters for wood, coal and the sweepings; fresh water and water pipes upon every story, gas fixtures in every apartment of the house, and a fire hose of 250 feet in length in connection with the building, which can easily be attached in a moment's warning. The edifice is three storys high, 164 feet in length, and 52 feet wide. It was built at a cost of between thirty-five and forty thousand dollars. The beauty and stateliness of the building is fully set forth in the engraving in front of the Directory.

MALE SCHOOLS.—In 1821 Greene Academy was put into operation and has continued to be the principle High School here ever since. It is situated on a beautiful eminence in the edge of the city. It is cool, shady and retired. It holds the same relation to the male portion of North Alabama that the Seminary does to the female portion. This time-honored institution is at present under the management of Charles O. Shepherd and A. E. Russel, both of them educated gentlemen and competent instructors. They were also both raised in Huntsville. The private school of Dr. Carlos G. Smith has been for some time a distinguishing feature in the advantages held out by Huntsville as home for parents. There are also several smaller schools here besides the two mentioned.

CHURCHES AND PASTORS.—There are five religious denominations in Huntsville, all of which are in active progress. The pulpit of Huntsville is filled respectively by the Rev. F. A. Ross of the Presbyterian church; Rev. W. D. Chadick of the Cumberland Presbyterian church; Rev. Henry C. Lay of the Episcopal Church; Rev. E. Strode of the Baptist church, and Rev. Wilborn Mooney of the Methodist church. The Methodist is the largest denomination here. The recently newly erected Episcopal and Presbyterian churches here are worthy of special remark from their beauty of architecture and unsurpassed in-door arrangements. The Episcopal church is a splendid specimen of Gothic architecture. The building consists of nave, with aisles, chancel, vestry and organ chamber. The length inside is 104 feet, width of nave and aisle 50 feet, height of tower and spire 151 feet. The chancel is lighted by three lancet windows of beautifully stained glass, with figures descriptive of Biblical incident. The aisles and nave are lighted by windows of tracery of varied description. There is a tower on the north-west corner, it is in two stages, flanked with buttresses while, the spire is octagonal and broached. The interior roof is open, with timbers exposed and panneled. The entrance is through the west end of nave and tower. It is calculated that the church will accommodate 600 persons. The late Frank Wills, Esq., of New York, is the designer of the edifice and Mr. Hugh Moore of Huntsville, the builder.

The Presbyterian church is a stately edifice of Gothic architecture and reflects lasting credit upon its designer, Major Hieman, of Huntsville. It is built upon the site of the old church and has the highest local elevation of any church in the place. Its dimensions are 89 feet by 50, with basement for lecture room and Sabbath school, vestry, &c. The windows are filled with stained glass of one color and reflect a soft and pleasant light. The ceiling is beautifully adorned in fresco. It is to be lighted thoroughly with gas, by chandalier, and fixture to cost $700. It is surmounted by a tower on the corner of 85 feet, which is to be surmounted by a spire of 85 feet.

The Cumberland Presbyterian church, a handsome Doric building, after standing incomplete for some time, has been finished under the superintendence of Mr. Mason, architect. The works were executed by Messrs. Scruggs and Winston, and Mr. Samuel Allison, of Huntsville. The Methodist Church, though numbering the largest congregation of any other church here, has but an ordinary building for worship. The Baptist church is more ordinary still. All of the church edifices mentioned, except the Baptist, are lighted with gas.

PUBLIC BUILDINGS. The Court House is a compact and commanding building on the Doric plan of architecture, situated in the center of the city. It is encompassed by a beautiful court yard of shade trees and waving grass. The building is three stories high, containing a basement for the sitting of the U. S.

Federal Court; upon the second story are the rooms for the Sheriff, Circuit Court, Clerk, Probate Judge and other county officers. The Court Room proper is in the third story, a large and commodious room flanked by two rooms for juries and witnesses. The building is supported north and south by immense fluted limestone-rock pillars; the top is surmounted by a beautiful dome containing a town clock which points the time of day from four faces and strikes every hour.

The "Bank," in which is transacted the business of the Northern Bank of Alabama, is a building of equal architectural beauty with the court-house. It is of Ionic architecture and fronting on the square, runs back until it overlooks the Spring Bluff. It is also supported in front by solid pillars of native limestone. It is withal one of the prominent features of Huntsville.

The Jail is a firmly built structure two stories high, the lower one of native limestone, and containing three rooms for the incarceration of criminals. The upper story is built of brick and contains two large rooms for the confinement of criminals of a minor grade. It is well ventilated and in point of structure, is quite an ornament to the city.

The Market House is a neat and handsome building, affording every facility for marketing. It contains a calaboose and office where is transacted all the business of the city police. The market house proper is sixty-two feet in length, containing nine stalls, three on each side.

The Masonic Hall is one of the oldest public buildings in Huntsville. It has been in active use for a number of years both as a place of meeting for the masonic fraternity and the lower part as a school room.

HOTELS.—Huntsville has suffered so severely by fire as to render the hotel facilities rather meagre. In 1850 a most disastrous fire visited Huntsville, and swept two squares and a half of the city including the splendid hotel known as the Caldwell House, and in the year 1855 we were again visited by a fire of great severity, which consumed the large hotel known as the Bell Tavern. There are at present three hotels in Huntsville—the Johnson House, the Madison House and Venable's Hotel.

NEWSPAPERS.—There are three newspapers being published in Huntsville. The Democrat, established in 1823, and edited at present by J. W. Clay. It is a strictly Democratic paper. The Southern Advocate, is also a Democratic paper, and is edited by Wm. B. Figures. The Huntsville Independent, an Opposition paper, is published and edited by J. W. Young and J. J. Dew.

GAS FIXTURES.—The present system of gas-works was established in 1856. The gas works are situated near the Spring. The kind used is made of rosin, in circular retorts—most of the public buildings and some private houses are lighted with gas. The works are owned by a private stock company.

WATER WORKS.—The water works of Huntsville have ever been a marked feature. Water is forced up an elevation of ninety-six feet into a reservoir, on a hill in the edge of the city whence it is distributed over town through the principal streets, in five inch cast pipes. The power used at the spring is a turbine wheel and a nine inch pump. The water facilities of the city give to every family the opportunity of running a water-pipe into their yard, thus giving an inexhaustable supply of pure and fresh water at all times. There are water plugs established at convenient distances all over the city, used in case of fire.

There is a well organized military company here, established in 1855. The Madison Rifles are under command of Capt. John Coltart.

There is an organized fire company here, and have been of infinite service to the city.

Z. P. Davis is Mayor of the city. There is an efficient city police, consisting of Marshal, day and night police.

There is a neat and well appointed theatre building in Huntsville. The conveniences of the building, including gas facilities and stage properties, guarantee us regular theatrical seasons, during which we command the same talent that adorns the Memphis and Nashville stages.

IMPROVEMENTS CONTEMPLATED—There is a splendid hotel in course of erection here, which promises to be in every respect equal to the first class hotels of Southern cities. It will contain twenty sleeping rooms, with a dining room forty by eighty feet, barber shop, bar, billiard saloon, etc., ladies' parlor, gentlemen's parlor, and reception room. It is situated on the site of the old Bell Tavern, immediately near the Spring, fronting on Jefferson street one hundred and twenty-five feet, and on Randolph one hundred and forty-two feet. It is four stories high in front and five in the rear, and is to include basement and cellars. It is to be lighted by gas and supplied with water from the Spring. The fronting lower story is divided into five stores. The building when completed will cost sixty thousand dollars.

The North Alabama College is being built upon an eminence one mile from town. It is of the castillated style of architecture. The building is to be three stories high, with two towers. It will contain a large lecture room and hall for societies. It is under the direction of the Presbytery of North Alabama, yet in the selection of professors it is allowable to choose them, irrespective of religious creed. It will cost when finished, from thirty to thirty-five thousand dollars.

The Reservoir is an immense receptacle for the water thrown up from the Spring, to be disseminated through the town. It was constructed at an immense cost, through a bed of limestone rock. It is ninety-six feet above the level of the Spring. Its dimensions are seventy feet in diameter and ten feet deep, and will hold 287,532 gallons of water.

MONTE SANO.—Monte Sano is a beautiful spur of the final continuation of the Cumberland Mountains. Its elevation is nine hundred and forty feet above the city level, and six hundred and twenty-four feet above the ocean level. The summer residences of some of the principle citizens of the place are upon this mountain. The air is at all times cool and bracing; on the top of the mountain is a magnificent spring of freestone water, 61° Fahrenheit, affording an interesting theme for geological investigation. The Cave, a short distance from the Spring is a great natural curiosity, and affords the mineralogical student a rich harvest in limestone formations and fossil remains. A greater curiosity is the existance of a natural well, known to be two hundred and five feet in depth, but measured by sound, indicates the extraordinary depth of nine hundred feet. It is perfectly circular and regularly formed. It is the intention of the citizens to make this place a summer resort for pleasure seekers. There is now on hand a project to build a turnpike to the top of the mountain, and the building of a large hotel for entertainment. It is a matter of some surprise that the business portion of Huntsville do not take more active steps in the consummation of this design, as the inducements held out by Monte Sano, as a permanent summer resort, including distance, facility, healthy and salubrious atmosphere, a fine spring of celebiate water, an unrivaled spring of freestone water, a beautiful cave, a natural well, lovely scenery, and an unsurpassed view of the valley below from different points, guarrantee to them an increase of trade, and of that select kind, too, which never fails to "pay" the merchant.

Huntsville boasts two foundries, the large machine shop of the Memphis and Charleston Railroad, a steam flour mill, and other mechanical establishments of the first order. There are four livery stables in the place.

The last and most prominent feature of Huntsville is its Spring, of which too much can not be said. It gushes out from under a perpendicular bluff in the center of the city. The temperature of the water is 58°. The cliff elevation is of solid limestone, upon which is built the Bank. Any attempt at a description of its local position, and the influences actuated by the sight of it, would be to assume the province of the romancist. Satis et non superque.

HUNTSVILLE*FEMALE SEMINARY,*S. J. MAYHEW, A. M., Principal.

This Institution was a feature in the early existence of the City of Huntsville. It has advanced with the requirements of the age.

It presents now to the people of the South, every facility for the attainment of a thorough female education. Its aim is to develope all that is good in mind and heart, and to suppress all that is evil;—to nurture the moral and physical as well as intellectual powers;—to form the TRUE WOMAN as well as the accomplished lady.

Its various departments will continue to be supplied with able and experienced teachers.

Its commodious buildings and beautiful grounds, possess the advantages of ample retirement and ease of access. Patrons sending from a distance may feel assured that their pupils will receive every requisite comfort and attention.

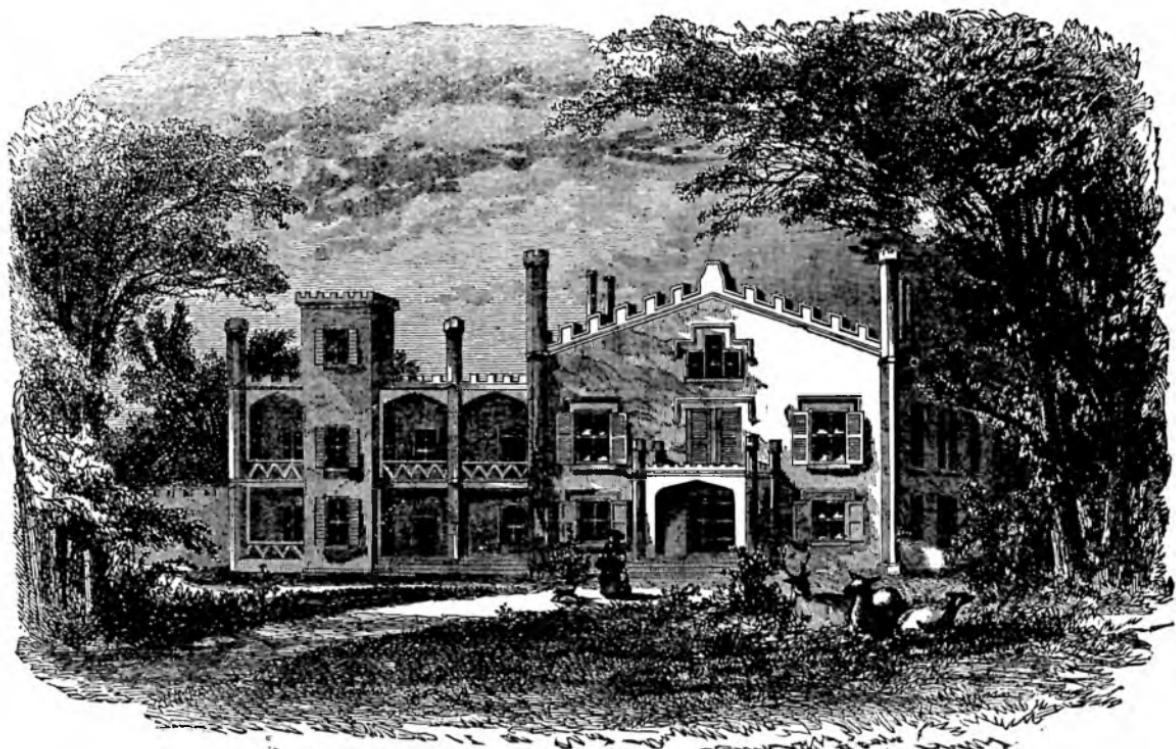

For particulars address the Principal, for other information reference is made to the following

HUNTSVILLE, ALABAMA,

REV. A. R. ERWIN, D. D., PRESIDENT.

Huntsville is a beautiful, cleanly and healthful town. Its inhabitants are intelligent, refined and moral. The College edifice is located on one of the most beautiful Streets of the town; is 164 feet in length and 52 in breadth, (See Frontispiece,)

It is well furnished with dumb-waiters, water pipes, gas fixtures, fire hose, etc. The School Rooms, and Study Hall, are furnished with the most approved styles of Desks, Seats, Black Boards, Maps, Globes, etc.

The Faculty is complete; consisting of twelve members, six in the Literary, five in the Musical, and one in the Ornamental department. They are all experienced and successful teachers. There are in attendance now (the second week of the Fall session of 1859,) more than 150 pupils, including seventy boarders from six of the Southern States.

The mode of Instruction is thorough, and the standard of Scholarship high. The domestic arrangements are such that the home feelings and virtues are developed and cultivated in each pupil. Neatness, order, economy, punctuality, cheerfulness, and a kindly regard for the welfare of others are especially insisted on. Three things are promised the patrons of the College; viz. The security, comfort, and thorough instruction of the pupils.

The Collegiate year will commence on the first Monday of September, and will continue without intermission 40 weeks.

Post Offices in the Mines.

We learn that the following offices have been established in the new mining region, and the gentlemen named appointed postmasters—San Vrain, Nebraska, C. M. Miles, P.M.—Lancaster, Nebraska, Charles Blake, P.M.—Auraria, Kansas, Henry Allen, P.M.—Mountain, Kansas, David T. Griffith, P.M.—Cornville, Kansas, Martha Snyder, P.M. It is said that by special contract these offices are to be supplied from Pacific City, Mills County, Iowa. If so, letters and papers should be marked via Pacific City.
