DEDICATION

In memory of Diane Robey, a native of Gig Harbor, Washington, who came to Huntsville in 1964, and spent more than twenty years in researching and recording with painstaking exactness the inscriptions on the tombstones in the oldest part of Maple Hill Cemetery.

Her fascination with the subject caused it to become her life work.

It was her wish that any profits derived from the sale of this publication would become part of the Perpetual Care Fund of Maple Hill Cemetery.

INTRODUCTION

This publication, which is being sponsored by the Huntsville-Madison County Historical Society, contains a brief history of the land transactions which started and later expanded the boundaries of Maple Hill Cemetery, one of the oldest public cemeteries in Alabama. It also includes the location and descriptions of the markers and monuments in the fifteen oldest sections in the cemetery. This compilation was made possible through the work of Diane Robey who, over a period of twenty years, researched and recorded with painstaking exactness the inscriptions on each tombstone. Unfortunately, Diane Robey did not live to see her work published, but it was her hope that any profit derived from this project would be dedicated to a perpetual care fund for Maple Hill Cemetery.

Some ten years ago the Huntsville Pilgrimage Association was organized to sponsor the showing of homes in the two historic districts of Huntsville. Profits from this annual event go toward the restoration of broken monuments in the oldest sections of the cemetery, especially those headstones marking the graves of prominent Huntsvillians without local descendants. All profits from the sale of this volume will go into a perpetual care fund to assure that restoration continues in the oldest sections of the cemetery.

Today Maple Hill Cemetery has reached near full capacity; in a certain sense, property in Maple Hill is among the most desirable in the city. The general serenity of the area, the splendid colors of the dogwood trees in the spring and fall, the literal "presence" of history makes this spot a truly peaceful park for Huntsville's citizenry. Researchers, strollers, joggers are seen in the area daily.

Every effort has been made to assure the accuracy of the material contained in this volume. It must be noted, however, that the ravages of time have defaced some monuments, making it difficult to verify inscriptions, especially dates. The authors hope there is minimal error. Each section contains the final date the stones were verified, and no burials after that date were entered.

Committee members from the Huntsville-Madison County Historical Society who worked on finalizing the project include Dorothy Scott Johnson, John Rison Jones, Jr., and Frances C. Roberts. Dorothy Johnson labored to transcribe Diane Robey's field notes and prepared that part of the manuscript for publication. John Rison Jones, Jr. and Frances C. Roberts provided historical notations and compiled the brief history of the cemetery. In addition to these three individuals, the committee wishes to acknowledge the assistance of Brenda Webb, who has the responsibility for oversight of all cemeteries in the city; Nan Hall for editorial help; George Mahoney for technical advice; Ranee Pruitt and Denise Terry for library assistance, and Betty Frazier who preserved and protected Diane Robey's efforts. The architectural firm of Jones and Herrin reproduced the cemetery map, the Huntsville Museum of Art provided the John Reese photographs, Stuart Siniad enhanced the antique photograph of the cemetery, and John Rison Jones, Jr. provided the remaining photography.

This volume covers only the oldest fifteen sections of the cemetery, and it is hoped that its publication will inspire future researchers to continue the work and record the remaining sections before the information is lost to the ravages of weather, vandals, and unintentional damage from maintenance machinery.

MAPLE HILL CEMETERY: ITS ORIGINS AND EXPANSION, 1822-1930

Early pioneers of Tennessee and Georgia knew that south of the new State of Tennessee lay a rich and fertile valley claimed by two Indian tribes and the State of Georgia. Although the tribes did not occupy the land at the time, the Georgia claims were, at best, spurious, and were based on the dubious concept of "sovereignty without occupation." That philosophy was to have severe consequences throughout the nation as a result of the infamous Yazoo frauds of the 1790s. Based on its concept of "sovereignty," the Georgia legislature sold these lands to private companies, who, in turn, sold the land to gullible citizens hungry for new western acquisitions.

The territory, known as "the land of the big bend of the Tennessee River," had intrigued pioneers, especially a fabled big spring, located beneath a limestone bluff at the foothills of an Appalachian spur later to be called "Monte Sano." John Hunt, the earliest documented pioneer to settle by the spring, had built his cabin there as early as 1805. About the same time, James Ditto settled some 10 miles south on the Tennessee River where he maintained a trading post, and established a ferry in 1807. There is ample evidence that Tennesseans and Georgians were well acquainted with the entire area. Obviously, this fertile land would be of great importance to the government of an expanding Mississippi Territory, more so with the Louisiana Purchase of 1803.

The decision to incorporate this land into the United States developed well over several decades. President Washington put into place the necessary steps toward acquisition which were subsequently carried out during the administrations of Presidents Adams and Jefferson. First, Georgia's claims (1802) had to be satisfied which, of necessity, included the settlement of the claims generated by the Yazoo frauds. Second, the Chickasaw (July 23, 1805) and Cherokee (January 7, 1806) claims were negotiated by treaty and purchase. Third, in accordance with the Land Ordinances (1785 - 1800), each new land had to be surveyed so that the territory could be described with mathematical exactness, i.e., based on latitude and longitude, to be sold at public auctions with a minimum purchase of a quarter section. This would end the longtime practice of descriptions based on the distance from inanimate objects such as trees, rocks, and rivers.¹ The land ordinance system divided land into townships of 6 square miles of 36 sections and then subdivided into quarter sections.

According to the Chickasaw and Cherokee treaties, the United States Secretary of War, Henry Dearborn, directed Thomas Freeman to proceed to the new territory to plot its location and to prepare the land for government sales. Freeman had come to the United States in 1784 from Ireland and settled in western Pennsylvania where George Washington placed him in charge of his lands along the Ohio and Kanawha Rivers. Ten years later, Freeman assisted in the completion of the survey of the City of Washington and the District of Columbia initiated by Andrew Ellicott and Charles Pierre L'Enfant. He was involved with Ellicott in determining the thirty-first parallel boundary line of the southern United States resulting from the Treaty with Spain in 1795. Further assignments were made by President Jefferson in the newly added lands of the Louisiana Purchase. Thomas Freeman, thus, was no stranger to the American frontier.²

On September 11, 1807, Freeman, Return J. Meigs, a Cherokee Indian Agent, General James Robertson, and Indian representatives met at Chickasaw Island (now Hobbs Island) to establish boundaries for the newly purchased Indian lands. A triangular area of 345,000 acres, south of the Tennessee state line, was created which became "old Madison County." At 86° 34' 18" longitude, a point almost midway of the base of the triangle, Freeman established the Huntsville Meridian from which point all the lands of northern Alabama were surveyed. Because of Freeman's reports of a land teeming with squatters, some 2,223 white inhabitants and 522 slaves, the Secretary of the Treasury, Albert Gallatin, required a census of this group. Freeman's report of January 1809 listed individual names of some 353 "Heads of Families."³ The next decisions were to shape the political and social history of Huntsville and, subsequently, Alabama.

Robert Williams, Governor of the Mississippi Territory, organized in 1798. created Madison County in the new territory by Executive Proclamation on December 18, 1808. The Territorial Legislature then extended its jurisdiction over the area on February 27, 1809, and shortly afterwards, President James Madison announced sales in the new territory to begin August 1 and to extend for three weeks at a land office in Nashville, Tennessee.

Although the squatters were given the right to remain on the lands they had settled and begun to cultivate until the lands were sold, few had the necessary funds for the initial quarter section purchase required, i.e. 160 acres. John Hunt's spring was especially desirable, and this quarter section was originally bought by LeRoy Pope, a landowner from Petersburg, Georgia, with William P. Anderson and James Jackson of Nashville. This trio paid $23.50 per acre for the site while surrounding acreage went for much less, and some for the minimum asking price of $2 per acre. Significant land purchases were also made by Pope's fellow Georgians. For a time it looked as though all of Petersburg would move to the new county. This roster of land owners would include significant families associated with the early history of Huntsville and Alabama; Bibb, Pope, Thompson, Walker, Percy, and Watkins. Unlike the usual concept of a pioneer, these men were rich, influential and educated. Of great importance was the fact that they had access to the seat of power of the nation, Washington, DC. This was of enormous importance ten years later when the territory sought statehood.⁴

By special act of the Territorial Legislature, a commission was created to designate a site for a county seat to be named Twickenham. Although several sites were proposed, LeRoy Pope was successful in having the bluff site by the spring selected. Therefore, he sold the commissioners the southern half of the town plat of 30 acres, but reserved the northern half for his own exploitation. He had become sole owner of the quarter section he had purchased with Anderson and Jackson. This area served as the nucleus of the new city which included two blocks in either direction from a central courthouse square immediately adjacent to the spring bluff. Only one block of the western edge of the square would be developed.

The original city limits of the new town, to be renamed Huntsville in 1811, became Lincoln Street to the east, Holmes Street to the north, Gallatin and Henry Streets to the west, and Williams Street to the south. Intersecting streets were named Jefferson, Washington, Clinton, Randolph, Eustis, Gates, Franklin, Madison, and Greene. Spring Street led off the square to the spring site.

A necessary development for the city was some thought about a burial ground. Death was no stranger on the frontier. It is not known when the first cemetery was designated, but its location is accurately described in a manuscript written by Judge Thomas Jones Taylor which served as the basis for his newspaper articles written between 1880 and 1886, later published as A History of Madison County, Alabama. Judge Taylor described the original cemetery site as:

"...that part of Patton's purchases on Greene Street is said to have been the location of a graveyard prior to the purchase of the present cemetery in 1824 and the principal burial place where the brick cottage now stands."⁵

This land was originally purchased by John Braham, the Northeast Quarter of Section 36, Township 3, Range 1 West (160.14 acres) in 1809, at the same time LeRoy Pope purchased the southeast quarter of the section.⁶ However, during the land sales of 1817 and 1818, Mr. Braham lost much of this land, a portion of which LeRoy Pope bought. On December 24, 1824, Mr. Pope and his wife, Judith, sold William Patton 32.19 acres on north Greene and Meridian Streets for $2,050.⁷ Mr. Patton, an Irishman, had come to Huntsville in 1811, and soon after became interested in a mill to process cotton. This would later develop as Bell Factory on the Flint River.

After the Civil War, a new street was cut east of Meridian Street on this property and named for John Williams Walker when the Patton heirs developed the northern end of the property. Judge Taylor's location of the first Huntsville cemetery was confirmed some fifty years ago during the construction of a Hill's Grocery Store on the south side of Walker Street near its intersection with Greene and Meridian Streets. During site preparation as the elevated land was lowered to the level of Walker Street, bones were uncovered. Older Huntsvillians previously believed that all remains had been moved from this site to a new graveyard. Obviously, this was not the case.

There are no records of this original cemetery, only the memory of Judge Taylor and those who witnessed the uncovered bones. When it became necessary to set aside land for burials is also unknown although the Territorial Records suggest that a cemetery was needed as early as 1810. Deed Book A of those records lists wills and probate dates which suggests immediate burials though not necessarily at the Huntsville site:⁸ Other early deaths are recorded in the Orphans Court minutes.⁹

Reasons for the relocation of the city cemetery are unknown although several explanations seem plausible. The site was within view of the main artery to Huntsville from the north, the Meridianville Road. The City Commissioners may have felt that the first sight of Huntsville should not be a graveyard. The site was within one block of Holmes Street, the northern city limit. Perhaps some thought was given to the expansion of the city northward and the need to have a location removed from the near environs of the developing city. A more plausible explanation might simply be that LeRoy Pope wanted to sell this newly acquired land and would be unable to do so with a burial ground on it.

For some years, several deeds have suggested that a new site was purchased in 1818. However, a close examination of these records indicate that this site was that of "Georgia," the original Negro cemetery located where the parking garage adjacent to Huntsville Hospital now stands on Madison Street.¹⁰

LeRoy and Judith Pope sold the President and Trustees of the Corporation of Huntsville 2 acres of land on September 14, 1822. The deed describes this property as "beginning at the LeRoy Pope and John Braham line at the stone on the Basis Meridian...." Although no reference is made in the deed to a graveyard, these acres comprise the oldest sections of Maple Hill Cemetery. The deed was recorded on October 4, 1828,¹¹ Early settlers were somewhat cavalier about recording transactions.

It is impossible to document the earliest burials at the new site. It was not to be called Maple Hill Cemetery until after 1901 when the Clay sisters, Susanna and Virginia, writing in The Democrat, called for a name for "the white cemetery." Major documentation in the Cemetery Office begins after 1865 but there are some important gaps in these materials. In the older sections, 1-9, one must rely on cemetery plat records and the few stone markers which remain, especially in Section 1, at the corner of Wells Avenue and Maple Hill Drive.

The earliest graves recorded in this volume seem to be: Mary Frances Atwood (September 17, 1820) and Napoleon Pope, son of Benjamin Pope (June 30, 1821). Thus, it is obvious with these early graves that the new site was in use well before the legal papers were drawn up. It is equally obvious, given the sparsity of headstones in Section 1, that many other graves possibly pre-date those cited. It is known that broken monuments were incorporated into the brick wall built around the cemetery in the 1920s and 1930s.

The expansion of Maple Hill into its present configuration began sometime in the late 1840s. The exact date is unknown. However, a map of great importance in plotting this expansion has been located. The original map in Chancery Records disappeared many years ago. A duplicate map is in Deed Book 114, which was drawn up by Elijah Hansbrough, the Surveyor of the County and Acting Justice of the Peace as of the date of the map, February 3, 1849. This map plots the holdings of the Estate of William H. Pope, the son of LeRoy, who died in 1848. This map supposedly drawn to the scale of 40 poles (660 feet) per inch seems to show a larger original section for the old cemetery in 1849. Lot #1, immediately south of the original cemetery, also consists of 2 acres. Since the dot in the old section represents the Meridian stone, then the southern boundary of the original section suggests the present entry drive into the cemetery. It would appear that prior to 1848 an additional 2 acres may have been added to the 1822 purchase. However, no record of such a transaction has been found.¹²

Forced to sell land by pressing creditors, the Administrator of the Pope Estate, LeRoy Pope Walker, was directed by the court to divide much of his Uncle's property adjacent to the City into lots and streets. This appears to be the origins of White and California Streets. Larger sections, to the east of California Street, were kept as sizable parcels for sale.¹³

There is no record of the sale of Lot #1 to the City. On February 3, 1849, it is considered a part of the Pope Estate. However, there are three important monuments on this property which suggest its use at an earlier time as a burial site. The first is a large monument which records the deaths of LeRoy and Judith Pope, John Williams Walker and his son, Charles Henry Walker. Some believe that these remains may have been moved to the cemetery following the sale of the Pope mansion, called Poplar Grove Plantation (now Echols Hill), to Dr. Charles Patton, the son of William Patton, in 1849 following William Pope's death. It is known that the Pope family maintained a burial ground on their property. But it is also conceivable that the private Pope burial ground could be this property, adjacent to the public cemetery. Thomas George Percy was buried on this site when he died in 1841. His wife, Maria, the daughter of LeRoy and Judith Pope, died in 1847, and three of their children who died between 1820 and 1844 are memorialized on the Percy obelisk. Nearby is the grave of John Connally, 1783-1845, the well known friend of President Andrew Jackson and the one-time owner of the famed Green Bottom Inn, located north of the city at Normal, Alabama.

These monuments suggest that this area may have been in use for burials by 1844 (the death of LeRoy Pope). When the lot was deeded to the city remains unknown. Whatever the case, the addition of Lot #1 became the southern boundary of Maple Hill sometime after 1849.

Further expansion became necessary when on May 5, 1873, the city purchased 12.45 acres from James J. Donegan who had purchased Lots #2 and #3 from the Pope Estate. Together with Lot

#1, this new section contains cemetery Sections 10 through 15, and most of Sections D through Potter's Field to the east.¹⁴

Two sections in the newest addition were to be reserved for religious congregations. A Hebrew Burial Ground was authorized by the City Council. The earliest burial here was that of Robert Herstein, who settled in Huntsville prior to 1855. He was buried in Maple Hill in 1878.¹⁵ Directly opposite in Section 15, a Catholic Burial Ground was developed. As with the Jewish Section, dates are not available either in cemetery records or at Temple B'nai Shalom or the Church of the Visitation for the specific dates of dedication. However, in 1939, Charles and Eliza Certain Rolfe sold to the City a lot which is specified in the area "known as the Catholic Section".¹⁶

For easier access to these new areas, the City Council voted to open a new road into the cemetery from California Street "by the Jewish Section" in 1895. This entry was called Cemetery Alley. Another sale of lots to the City occurred in 1953 when Edwin Dudley Burwell sold Lots 6 and 7 in Block 10 which would allow for the expansion of the Cemetery Office.¹⁷

Even with the addition of more than 12 acres, the demand continued to grow for new burial sites to the point that on September 6, 1881, further land was obtained to the immediate east of the original cemetery and the William H. Pope Lot #1 addition. This property, 3.2 acres, was obtained for $341.00 from Morris and Henrietta Bernstein who had purchased property from the court-enforced sale of the George Steele Estate at public auction on December 6, 1880.¹⁸ The Bernsteins secured 30 acres of the Steele property for $26.25 per acre, or a total of $795.00. The remaining portion of this land was obtained later to create the Chapman-Lee residential subdivision created in 1888.

The Bernstein purchase was important because it now provided a straight line southward for all of the city property down to the holdings of James B. White, or Lot #4 of the William H. Pope property. This allowed the city to add new streets within the cemetery proper and included sections designated as A through C, to join D through the Potter's Field of the Donegan property. The cemetery became an enclosed rectangle with common borders on all sides.

The need for further expansion was due to a number of probable causes. The age of the city now produced third and fourth generation families with no burial spaces in the older sections for their growing families. The coming of an industrialized economy based on cotton manufacturing in the 1880s and later would essentially double the town's population. Although two mill village cemeteries were to be created, one for the Dallas community and later one for Merrimack Village, these families too desired to be buried at Maple Hill.

To meet this challenge and to prepare for the future, the city purchased additional lands south of the Donegan Addition of 1873 when Mary Y. McClelland of St. Louis, Missouri, offered 6.14 acres to the city on June 3, 1903. Her asking price was $1,600. This transaction involved two sections: one was about 2.14 acres which Thomas White gave his son, James B. White, in 1871. This was part of Lot #4 of the William H. Pope sale. The property fronted on California Street and McClung Avenue extended. The second property was immediately behind this lot and was also conveyed by Thomas White to his son on November 20, 1886.¹⁹ This section was about 4 acres and was west of additional White property which would be divided by his heirs and sold at a later date for a private cemetery.

The next addition to Maple Hill was the substantial gift of Albert Russel Erskine. This was a complicated set of transactions which involved the City Cemetery Commission of Huntsville, which was created on September 7, 1922, to receive gifts of property for the cemetery, as well as to administer its growing development.²⁰ Probably prompted by his mother's death in 1915, Albert Russel Erskine, the great-grandson of Colonel Albert Russel and the grandson of Dr. Alexander Erskine, began to acquire a significant parcel of land to surround a handsome mausoleum which would contain the remains of his parents, William Michael Erskine (1847-1897) and his wife, Ursula Ragland (1850-1915) as well as Mr. Erskine (1871-1933) and his wife, Annie Lyell Erskine. Albert Russel Erskine had achieved international prominence in the automobile world as the president of the Studebaker Corporation as well as the one-time presidency of the Pierce-Arrow Corporation.

At the east end of the Bernstein Addition of 1881, Mr. Erskine began to acquire a large tract of land from the Chapman-Lee Addition of 1888. Beginning on February 12, 1916, through May of that year, Mr. Erskine acquired Lots 1-9 of Block 1.²¹ He deeded this property to the Cemetery Commission as the 1918 Erskine Addition to Maple Hill.²² The Cemetery Commission then deeded back a circular plot of ground, approximately 60 feet in diameter, where the mausoleum was built. Then on September 27, 1922, Mr. and Mrs. Erskine deeded all of the property, except the mausoleum and several plots to the south, reserved as gifts, to the City.²³

Thus, with a new entry to the cemetery constructed in 1916, a wide street continued eastward to the imposing Erskine Mausoleum and its twin circles. In 1920 three additional properties were purchased by the Cemetery Commission to complete the eastern portion of the Erskine Addition. This property, called the Church Addition, also part of the Chapman-Lee Addition, extended the Erskine gift to Wells Avenue with the exception of a small Cumberland Presbyterian Church which was later acquired by the City in 1936.²⁴

Maple Hill took its present form with the addition of the James B. Stevens property in 1924. On March 20, the Commission purchased 59 acres from Mr. Stevens and his wife, Elise Donegan Stevens, for $12,000.²⁵ This purchase more than tripled the cemetery holdings. The deed is entitled "War Deed" due to the desire of the city to dedicate a portion of the new area for a military section to honor veterans of World War I. However, no action was taken on this until 1947 and after another World War.²⁶

With this major expansion, the Cemetery Commission was abolished by the City Council in 1930. In a deed of conveyance dated April 30, 1930, the Commission returned to the city its holdings. Included in the deed were the following properties:

The James B. White Property; Maple Hill Cemetery as received by the Commission; the Church Addition comprising Lots 10, 11 and 14 of Block 1 of the Chapman-Lee Addition; the Stevens Addition; and the Erskine Addition less the Mausoleum area.²⁷

Thus, Maple Hill Cemetery took its present shape over one hundred and eight years. Without adequate records, it is impossible to estimate the number of burials, but it is believed the number is more than 100,000.

On April 8, 1995, the Alabama Historical Commission held an important meeting in Montgomery, Alabama, to discuss the role of cemeteries in our history. Dr. Gregory Jeane of Samford University discussed the value of cemeteries as one of the more important developments in a community. To paraphrase Dr. Jeane:

"Cemeteries give us information about land valued and held sacred by early town founders, the funerary art, family and cultural burial traditions, available materials, craftsmanship, ornamental plantings, birth and death records, and much more. Unlike historic buildings that generally undergo alterations over the years, cemeteries are the most unchanged physical landscapes from our past."²⁸

Much of the history of Huntsville is found at Maple Hill Cemetery. It is one of the most valuable record of this city and its development.

ROWS 2 and 3

There are no tombstones in either of these rows. There are, however, countless unmarked graves, mostly those of Union soldiers who died in Huntsville during occupation in the Civil War. These soldiers are believed to be buried throughout Section 1. By 19 November 1862, 180 Union soldiers had been buried here but only the names of those interred during the month of August, 1862 have been determined through research. The list was compiled by J. R. Goodwin, Assistant Surgeon of the 37th Indiana Regiment and appeared in the Cincinnati Daily Gazette of 19 November 1862. Most of the bodies are believed to have been removed to the Chattanooga National Cemetery in 1867 or claimed by relatives. Nevertheless, the names of the soldiers, and the dates of their deaths and regiments are as follow:

- YEATMAN In memory of Preston Yeatman, born April 9th 1799 - died March 10th 1841. Esteemed & beloved by all who knew him. He was a kind Husband, Father & friend. This stone was erected by a friend who highly valued his many good qualities. Blest hope the glorious Gospel gives. Our friend is gone; and yet he lives. Gone to the realms of purest bliss, there to enjoy eternal peace. From sin and woe forever free, Where but with Jesus should he be. Why should we wish him here to stay, From Christ and bliss so far away.
Note: About nine feet south of Preston Yeatman's grave is a sandstone marker with no carving. The next stone, that of Mary Rose, is over 33 feet from the un-lettered sandstone marker.
- ROSE Mary Rose died May 10, 1829 Aged 45 years.

I will not weep my boy for thee, Though thou wert all the world to me; I would not wish thee waked again, to strive like me with want and pain. I will but close that still bright eye and kiss that brow so pale and high, And those pure lips, whose tones divine, Caught their first tones, First prayers from mine, And fold thee to this bosom lone, Which thou hast left cold as thine own, And thus implore the God who takes, To help the heart thine absence breaks, Yet ’twas to heaven thy sole was borne, And wherefore should thy parent mourn, Perhaps in mercy He reproved, The selfish zeal with which I loved, I’ll mourn no more; my God thou know’st the wealth my stricken heart has lost! O’ shield me from repining cares, When other parents pain is to theirs.

FOOTNOTES

MOORE Samuel B. Moore, the surviving son of Dr. David Moore, is buried in an unmarked grave in the family plot. Because a member of the family was not chosen as executor, no marker was placed on the grave. Mr. Moore served as adjutant in the 26 Alabama Infantry Regiment, CSA. He is more famous for the ball given at his home on Adams Street for his prize-winning cow, Lily Flagg.

ROSS Frederick A. Ross was the long-time minister to the First Presbyterian Church, 1855-1875, and of great comfort to his congregation during the Federal occupation of Huntsville and during Reconstruction. On more than one occasion he had difficulties with the occupying forces because of his anti-Union sentiments.

Section 8

Left side: He was nature's favorite child, blessed with a matchless person, a superior mind and a noble heart. The manner in which he sustained his social relations in life commanded the love and esteem of his relatives and friends, and is a priceless consolation in their distressing bereavement.

Front: As a son his filial piety was exemplary, as a friend he was constant and generous; as a master he was humane and indulgent; as a gentleman he was chivalrous and affable, and as a man he was liberal, charitable and benevolent. In his death, humanity has lost a patron, poverty a protector, society an ornament, his parents their all. His career in the world was brief but bright: and it is hoped that the many virtues of his heart and mind will be matured and will flourish perpetually in the Paradise of his God.

FOOTNOTES

Prominent Jewish Leaders Buried in Maple Hill

- BERNSTEIN Morris Bernstein was born in Hanover, Germany in 1824 and immigrated to the United States in the 1840's. He married Henrietta Newman in Huntsville in 1852. Mr. Bernstein was a founding father of B'nai B'rith in 1875 and of Temple B'nai Sholom the next year. His eldest daughter married Oscar Goldsmith.
- HERSTEIN Robert Herstein, born in Darmstadt, Germany in 1831, was the first member of the congregation of the Temple to be buried in Maple Hill. The City Directory of 1859 shows him as a clothier. He was City Treasurer for a number of years and served as a councilman 1877-1878. He was active in founding the Temple B'nai Sholom.
- SCHIFFMAN Isaac Schiffman, born in Germany in 1856, immigrated to the United States in 1875 to join his uncles, Solomon and Daniel, in business in Huntsville. He married Bettie Herstein in 1895. Mr. Schiffman established I. Schiffman & Company which dealt in investments and cotton. Their son, Robert, was one of the first automotive dealers in the city.
- GOLDSMITH Oscar Goldsmith, treasurer of the Dallas Mills until his death, was a major stockholder in the mill. He was president of the Huntsville Land Company which was instrumental in the development of East Huntsville. His wife was prominent in the Huntsville Infirmary and was a major figure in the development of the United Charities in the city.

Prominent Catholic Leaders Buried in Maple Hill

- GRACE Clarence M. Grace, who operated an iron foundry in the city for a number of years, was active in civic affairs. His wife, Mary Frances Coyle Grace, was a major figure in civic affairs as well.
- MAHONEY George Mahoney was a successful clothier in Huntsville during the 1920's and through World War II. He played an important role in the expansion of Huntsville in the 1940's and 1950's and was instrumental in the location of the Redstone Arsenal in Madison County.
- BRADLEY John J. Bradley was the earliest Ford dealer in the city and played a role in the real estate development of Eustis Street.
- MAZZA John N. Mazza was well-known for his confectionary store in Huntsville. His son, Sylvester, was prominent in Huntsville Real Estate, a tradition carried on by Sylvester's son.
