

With Beulah Love's marker being the only inscribed tombstone in the cemetery, there were two approaches to research. One involved determining just who Beulah Love might have been. The other centers around land records. Both avenues were pursued successfully.

Beulah Love was first found by researching the marriage records for grooms with the surname of Love, assuming that she was married to get that name. From this search, a marriage record was found for Beulah Smith to wed a Moses Love in Madison County:
