

Old photo by J. N. Weldon found in historical files at RSA Environmental Offices, showing relocation of graves from near the junction of Morris Road with Toftoy Thruway to Indian Creek Cemetery.

In the center of this old, faded photo there can be seen a man at the base of the trees who is lifting a coffin. A transfer box is shown in the foreground. It seems from this information that the Indian Creek Cemetery was basically constructed to hold the transferred graves from this unnamed cemetery. A check of land records of the 1800s suggests some of the family surnames of people who may have been buried here and then moved to the Indian Creek Cemetery: