

William Timmons also set up a “land trust” for his wife in 1869, as a protected repayment for $3000 that he had taken from her in 1861, when the Civil War began. That money was probably used to help finance his part in the war, and possibly to provide finances to the overall Confederate cause.