Another young hero gone. JAMES W. FRANKS, son of BRITTON FRANKS, fell mortally wounded at Parkers Cross Roads December 31, 1862.

COLONEL GEORGE WALTON, son of one of the Signers of the Declaration of Independence died in Petersburg, Virginia a few days since aged 73. He was formerly Territorial Governor of Florida and later in life Mayor of Mobile. He was father of the amiable and accomplished MRS. OCTAVIA WALTON LeVERT of this city. Mobile Register and Advertiser. Obituary: COL. GEORGE WALTON died in Petersburg Virginia on the 3rd instant. He was born in Augusta, Georgia during the Revolution; he had in his illustrious father, the Signer of the Declaration of Independence and a gallant officer and eminent jurist, and in his accomplished mother (MISS CAMPER) who has been well styled one of the heroines of that trying period the best exemplars of intellectual, social and patriotic worth. He graduated at Princeton College, and when barely of age (1812) was elected to the Georgia Legislature. In 1821 he was appointed Secretary of the Territory of Florida while JACKSON was governor, and succeeded him in that office; in his administration founded the city of Tallahassee and bestowed its name. He removed to Mobile in 1837 or 1838 and was elected mayor. For several years he has resided in Washington and Virginia. In early manhood he married MISS SALLIE MINGE WALKER, daughter of an eminent lawyer of Georgia, who preceded her husband to the grave by two years. They had two children, MAJOR ROBERT WALTON, whose untimely death bore to the tomb promises of a brilliant career, and our fair townsoman.
